Can Chemistry Do It?

The American Chemical society sends bulletin with the cheering news that chemistry is rallying to the aid of the people of this country who continue to insist that they must have When the society holds its 1920 meeting all the chemists will put their heads together to devise means fo making food grow where none grew be fore. The inference is that the more food the cheaper, though this does not of necessity follow in a day when eco nomic laws are being made to order, a ew batch every week.

One item in the chemists' program is "lo advocate the greater use of the humble peanut as food for man and heast." Another is "to seek substitutes for meat which contain the requisite protein." Disclosures are promised which will make it possible for any-one to have sugar in his home the year round, and there is some talk of the unveiling of new ideas in cheese. There is no doubt that the chemist can do it if they put their minds to During the war the chemists of Germany got so they could conjure a seven course meal, with wines, out of a bushel of seaweed. THE UNION DRY GOODS COMPANY

Co-operative Experiment

When this company agreed to make a trial of the 5c fare within certain limits, it was understood that reports would be published showing the income resulting therefrom as compared with the income last year under the straight 6c fare.

These comparative figures for the month of March are as follows:

Number of 6c fares, 18,401; revenue $1,104.06 Number of 5c fares, 15,912; revenue $795.60 Loss of 2,489

These figures do not afford any adequate comparison, because the revenues for this year were substantially reduced by the suspension of service caused by the severe storms occurring in the early part of the month.
